Highlight:
Business Technology

Functional/User Testing, Change Management and Stakeholder Engagement.

I began the rotation with the Business Technology group due to a relationship with a mentor in that department. I became a project member of the Time and Labour Management Project. It was a global project which the Broadmeadows site piloted to optimise the way we manage labour and workload. It significantly improved the way we understand working patterns and changed the way we manage personnel on site.

I started as part of the test team, eventually transitioning to business requirements assessment, stakeholder engagement and change management. My key contribution was delivering a different work style and pay option that was initially not within scope but has been utilised by many departments since deployment.
